Gentlemen:

Edythe Squier Draper is an able writer with great potential creative ability, but lacks leisure time to develop her talent. In spite of handicaps, she has been reprinted by O'Brien and honor-rolled. Her story "Quinine and Honey" published in the Kansas Magazine, of which I am editor, was listed in O'Brien's 1957 Best Stories -- with an asterisk.

I am happy to recommend her for the Houghton Mifflin Literary Fellowship, for which I understand she has applied.

Very truly yours,

C. E. Rogers

Industrial Journalism and
Editor, The Kansas Magazine
