

Washburn Writers Program Employment Application

Washburn Writers are Washburn graduate students or advanced undergraduates with a strong writing background who identify themselves as writers and who wish to help others become writers. They serve as writing mentors and work through curricular and extracurricular activities to encourage a writing community at Washburn.

Applicants: Please write a letter to the program directors in which you discuss your own writing background and address the following topics:

1. Willingness to work with beginning students (including those who have yet to discover an interest in writing) one-on-one and in groups;
2. Willingness to share your own writing, including the revision process;
3. Willingness to work with other Washburn Writers and the program directors in program development; and
4. Willingness to attend teaching workshops and staff development sessions.

Please include with this letter some of your own favorite writing. Include a variety of writing, drawn from at least two different genres, such as creative non-fiction, critical essays, course papers, poems, short stories, plays, personal narratives, or research papers. Also, kindly provide a list of three references including contact information. Choose people to be references who can address the qualifications listed above, as well as the issues of conscientiousness, initiative, self-direction, and reliability.

Please submit applications to Ann Callies, CUSP (Mo. 122), by May 30, 2008. Any questions may be e-mailed to wwp@washburn.edu Thank you!
