

Jasper is graduating with a Bachelor of Arts in Religious Studies and a minor in Anthropology. They plan to pursue further graduate-level education up to the Ph.D level in East Asian Religions and a possible secondary degree in Library Science. Throughout the rest of their higher education, they hope to pursue field research overseas in Japan and South Korea.

Jasper is a member of the Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society and the Alpha Sigma Lambda Honor Society. They have been involved with the Honors Student Council and Queers & Allies, as well as previously done work with Bods Feeding Bods, Washburn's food pantry initiative. In their sophomore year, they interned with Kansas Interfaith Action, a statewide advocacy group, working closely with clergy of varying faiths to address issues of social justice across Kansas.

For their Washburn Transformational Experience, they spent a month abroad in Japan between Tokyo and Fukuoka with the Political Science program, learning both about local culture and international political relations.
