

Rajeshwori is a first-generation college student from Nepal receiving a degree in Computer Information Sciences with minors in Data Analytics and Mathematics. Coming to Washburn was a big leap of faith, and over time it became a place where she found her voice and sense of direction. During her time at Washburn, Rajeshwori has had opportunities to get involved across campus, including serving as a Campus Activities Board Director, President of ByteBods, a content creator for Student Media, and a tutor for Symbolic Logic. Each of these experiences helped her grow, both academically and personally, and taught her how to communicate, collaborate, and adapt to new challenges. Looking ahead, she plans to pursue graduate studies focused on making technology more human-centered and sustainable. She hopes to return to Nepal and use what she's learned to contribute in meaningful ways.
