

Hello everyone. My name is Ajar Basnet, and I am from the capital city of Nepal, Kathmandu. I am a junior at Washburn University. I am currently pursuing a dual degree: Bachelor of Science in Mathematics and Bachelor in Business Administration, with my majors being Actuarial Science and Finance, respectively. Pursuing my higher education in the United States was always been my dream. Later in life, my dream was fueled with the desire to be independent and to search for my passion being away from home. I do not have a concrete plan for my future, but I know that I want to hone my skills and develop qualities that would help me be a better person in the future. I started as a Finance major, but my interest in mathematics swayed me in integrating Actuarial Science as my major. In my time at Washburn University, I have mainly been a part of the Mathematics Tutors. I will be tutoring this semester too, and I hope that I will be able to help as many of you as possible. Coming to a different country can be challenging, but the supportive environment of the university will guide you all in your paths. Never hesitate to ask for help, and you shall find success in the university. Lastly, do not forget to have fun.
