Dependency status determines whose information must be provided on the FAFSA – student and parent (dependent) OR just student and/or spouse, if married (independent). Students are only considered to be independent if they meet certain criteria, as established by federal regulations.

More information regarding dependency status and criteria can be found at <https://studentaid.ed.gov/sa/fafsa/filling-out/dependency>.

If you do not meet independent status criteria, but believe you have unusual circumstances, you may submit an independent appeal for review. Appeals for independent status are reviewed on a case-by-base basis and are only granted for unusual, documented circumstances, such as the following.

Check the box that applies.

- Student's voluntary or involuntary removal from parents' home due to an abusive situation that threatened the student's safety and/or health
 - Incapacity of parents such as incarceration, disability or mental or physical illness
 - Inability of the student to locate the parent(s) after making reasonable efforts
 - Other extenuating circumstances sufficiently documented by a signed letter from a third party
- Letters written will need to provide supporting information for any box checked above. Most letters and documentation should also include dates, current living situation, and current contact with parents. Additional information may be requested.

The following conditions do not qualify for an independent appeal:

- Parents' refusal to contribute to the student's education
- Parents are unwilling to provide information on the FAFSA or for verification
- Parents do not claim the student as a dependent for income tax purposes
- Student demonstrates that he or she is fully self-sufficient

If you believe you have an unusual circumstance that may qualify for an independent appeal, complete steps 1-4.

- 1. Complete a 2021-2022 FAFSA (<https://fafsa.ed.gov>) without parent information.
 - If your appeal is denied, you will have to correct your FAFSA with parent information at that time.
- 2. Submit a personal letter of appeal to the Financial Aid Office, indicating why you should be considered independent for financial aid purposes.
- 3. Submit supporting documentation from authoritative, objective, third-party individuals or organizations.
 - These may be letters to the Financial Aid Office from individuals who have first-hand knowledge of your situation, copies of legal documents, or other applicable documentation.
 - Letters may not be written by Washburn employees in admissions, financial aid, student one stop, or success coaches.
 - Letters of support from relatives and friends are not considered third-party and therefore will only be accepted for cases in which other appropriate documentation cannot be obtained (case-by-case).
 - Examples of appropriate third-party documentation include, but are not limited to:
 - Counselors or teachers
 - Courts
 - Government agencies
 - Medical personnel

4. Submit required household and 2018 tax documentation.
